Online event, 27 and 28 April 2021: World Heritage – Shaping the future

What do we want to achieve for World Heritage? How do our expectations match the needs of young people? How, and through which media, do we address young people?

As “designers of the future”, young people play a central role in the protection and preservation of UNESCO World Heritage sites. In the framework of "World Heritage – Shaping the future", join youth researcher Simon Schnetzer in our online conference and help develop the active participation and engagement of younger generations in shaping the future of World Heritage sites. The aim of the conference is to engage young people to cocreate the future of World Heritage, to identify central challenges and to develop creative solutions. To achieve this, the active participation of young people - as "heirs of tomorrow" - is called for!

The event will be held in German. Information on registration and the programme will follow shortly.
